

The ability to install and project manage to such a scale was the key reason for the contract being awarded to the AFE-Shine consortium.

FALCON RADIANT CHARGRILL

WILLIAMS COLDROOM

Walking out through the tunnel to the roar of the crowd at Wembley is the dream of many a child. As we all grow up, the reality begins to fade but an opportunity of a lifetime to get involved, really involved with this prestigious, iconic location might still arise.

Involvement with the partnership that fulfilled the foodservice equipment contract at the new National Stadium provided just that opportunity. The catering equipment consortium of AFE, working with premier distributors Shine, delivered, installed and commissioned the equipment for the project worth in excess of £9 million and thought to be one of the largest single contracts of its kind.

The capacity of the new Wembley is 90,000, making it one of the largest all-seated, covered stadia in the world. More than just an arena for football; rugby, music events and world-class athletics are also lined up to take advantage of the revitalised stadium.

The days of being limited to having a pie and bovril at half-time have gone the way of the old Wembley towers. The requirement for world-class catering is almost as important as the venue itself. That includes corporate entertainment for dignitaries and celebrities who expect high standards of service no matter what the location.

The final result is something that Shine and AFE can really be proud of. Williams Refrigeration provided the cold room and refrigeration/freezing solutions while Falcon Foodservice supplied the prime-cooking equipment, selected from their extensive portfolio. Serviceline completed the one-stop shop service by installing and commissioning all of the equipment.

The sheer scale of the installation meant that those involved were required to have project managers operating on-site at all times. The Falcon equipment was delivered as required, along with production line items of refrigeration. Several items of the cook-chill solution were bespoke to the site so constant supervision was essential to ensure everything was tailored to meet the exact requirements of each area.

This ability to supply, install and project manage on such a scale was the key reason for the contract being awarded to the Aga Foodservice Equipment -Shine consortium.
